We wish all our readers a very happy and safe Halloween

Halloween An Irish Festival.

In the ancient Celtic world in Ireland, Samhain (pronounced Sowin) was the end of summer and the beginning of winter. Samhain remains the Irish word for November. The transition was marked on the 31st of October and November 1st. It was believed that at this time, the dead returned to the mortal world to bring back souls with them. The practice of dressing up to look like the visiting dead was intended to allow the living to be mistaken for the returning dead and not be marked by them for death. When Christianity introduced the feast of All Saints on November the 1st and All Souls on November 2nd, the Irish saw it as in keeping with their ancient pagan traditions. Irish emigrants brought these traditions all over the world with them, So Halloween is now an international festival. Most notably the practice of carving and lighting pumpkins is firmly linked to Ireland Large turnips and potatoes served the purpose now ascribed to pumpkins. They were known as, jack-o'-lanterns, from an Irish folktale about a man named Stingy Jack. Irish immigrants brought the practice to America, where pumpkins were easier to find than turnips or potatoes and it became an integral part of Halloween festivities

Stingy Jack an Irishman invited the Devil to have a drink with him. Stingy Jack didn't want to pay for his drink, so he convinced the Devil to turn himself into a coin that Jack could use to buy their drinks. Once the Devil did so, Jack decided to keep the money and put it into his pocket next to a silver cross, which prevented the Devil from changing back into his original form. When Jack died, God wouldn't allow him into heaven and the Devil wouldn't allow him into hell. He was instead sent into the eternal night, with a burning coal inside a carved-out turnip to light his way. He's been roaming the earth ever since. The Irish began to refer to this spooky figure as "Jack of the Lantern," which then became "Jack O Lantern."

Spooky Facts????

A woman travelling into to Clonegal Village on a pony and trap circa 1900 on a dark winters evening offered a lift to a strange man walking towards the village. He sat on to the trap but made no conversation. He got off the trap without speaking as she neared the village and crossed into a field. When she arrived home her family noticed that one side of her body, the side nearest the man she carried was a black colour as if burned. No one else saw him and he was never identified.
